Applications reviewed on a rolling basis.

Oak Ridge Institute for Science and Education is currently accepting applications for the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE), Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy (EERE) Science, Technology and Policy (STP) Program Fuel Cells Technologies Office (FCTO).

What will I be doing? You will learn and engage in critical aspects of FCTO's mission, such as materials compatibility, liquefaction, pipelines, tube trailers, and technologies used at hydrogen fueling stations, such as compressors, storage vessels, dispensers, and cryopumps. You will increase your skills in technical review of projects, drafting key documents summarizing program strategy and accomplishments, techno economic analysis to inform program target-setting, organization of workshops and conferences to solicit feedback from expert stakeholders, identification of priority areas of research, and giving presentations at technical conferences and events.

Why should I apply? You will enhance your education and training in hydrogen infrastructure partnerships and multi-office collaboration, increase your marketability in these disciplines, collaborate with top scientists and engineers in energy efficiency and hydrogen infrastructure, and gain insight into career opportunities through your experiences and under the leadership of your mentor.

Where will I be located? Washington, D.C.
